Things I would consider if I were opening my own store: Higher Priority 1. Low rent - It will take time to become established 2. Space - Room to have enough gaming tables and stock without feeling cramped 3. Comfort - Comfy furniture, toilets, temperature control, refreshments, cleanliness and ventilation (no-one likes a smelly shop). 4. Parking / Bike racks Lower priority 5. Visibility/high traffic area - Free advertising and more walk-in trade. 6. Separate gaming area - I've been in shops that have a separate room for the gamers to stay and hang and not get in the way of the shop/browsing area and liked the feel. Would work well in a cafe/shop at the risk of looking less busy. 7. Walking distance - younger teens aren't likely to have cars

Within reasonable walking distance

Slightly away from the high street would hopefully keep drawing in newcomers, whilst also being out of the way enough to keep a peaceful atmosphere.

Not living in st neots these are the areas i know, parking in town is easy enough, and i know some places to park in ES

Eaton Socon is local for me! Off high street will be cheaper - the priority is getting somewhere that could have 4+ gaming tables so people can come regularly and buy/order products

I'd be coming by public transport, so near the centre of town (for the bus) or near the train station would be easiest.

All of those are Within walking distance of town

Wants to be within a good walking distance of town. Especially with people coming from outside the town to play.

Because I live in Peterborough and it will be closest to me there
